AN INTRODUCTION

Humpty Dumpty Isn't The Only One Having A Great Fall

After the final season of 'Game Of Thrones' last year, I am going to amend the sentiment that I traditionally start my autumn columns with. Winter is, uh, on the horizon. And while maybe this isn't the autumn we pictured, it's the autumn we have, so as the days get shorter and we do our best to soak up the last sunlight, let's all try to appreciate the numerous wonders this city gives us. We're lucky to be in Reykjavik. Where else can you eat a hot dog for breakfast without social judgement?

So here we go: your guide to having a spectacular fall in Reykjavik. Along with all the winners, in this issue you'll find an interview with Ogolúgo, your destination for African food downtown (p.20), a run-down of the newest and brightest spots in the city (p.22), and the Grapevine Book Club's top recommendations for Icelandic reading. So say goodbye to the sentence "I'm bored!" Whether you're in quarantine, social distancing, or—God-willing—the post-pandemic world, the Grapevine has got you covered. We care.

Anyway, while you're here, be sure to pick up a copy of our flagship publication, The Reykjavik Grapevine—it's packed with news, culture and info on the top events in town. If you're on a budget, download our Appy Hour and Happening apps for cheap booze and event listings. And look out for our Best of Iceland magazine and app to learn what's worth checking out in the Icelandic countryside. More? Don't miss our YouTube channel at youtube.com/TheReykjavikGrapevine for travel content, interviews, news and more. We love to hear from you, so hit us up at @rvkgrapevine on Twitter and Instagram or at grapevine@grapevine.is. No conspiracy theories, please (unless they're about 'Saved By The Bell' being a vehicle for the Illuminati, of course).

Finally, if you enjoy this Best Of guide, please consider supporting The Reykjavik Grapevine by joining our High Five Club at grapevine.is/high-five-club, where for just a few euros a month, you can ensure our journalists do cool things like eat, buy shampoo, and give you the best independent journalism around. Make sure to check out our shop at shop.grapevine.is too for everything from Icelandic perfume to local candy to mugs that say "Þetta reddast" on it. You need that. Also, book your tours at gotravel.grapevine.is for Grapevine-approved entertainment.

Thanks. Black Lives Matter.

THE AWARDS:

How We Picked the Winners

The word “conclusion” is a little strong in this case. We have argued, fought and interviewed panels, tried blind taste-tests, and, in one case, consulted what we believe to be an oracle. This was not an easy or scientific endeavour.

The best comparison is glíma, or Icelandic wrestling. It’s not flashy or well produced like WWE. It’s not exactly graceful like Olympic wrestling, especially Greco-Roman. It’s two people in weird leather underwear, staring into each other’s eyes and trying to hip-check each other while simultaneously attempting an atomic wedge.

We’ll be honest. Some of the winners are just outright winners, but some are a matter of debate and controversy. Like in any other country, there are cliques or special interest groups. The bar most liked by a 22-year-old noise music fanatic might seem a little off-putting to a bespectacled jazz enthusiast. We’re not saying those two groups can’t overlap. Maybe they can. Jazz people are good at improvising and noise music definitely needs more fans.

The thing is, this is a guide. It’s a work in progress. It’s an attempt at letting people know where we think they should go. We didn’t all agree on everything, so the runners up could end up being more palatable to you, and the winners could be your third favourite. Yikes.

If this lack of certainty is too much for you: Imagine being the original tourist to Iceland. A wandering tax-evader from Norway who decides to settle on a rock almost uninhabited by animal life. A land that occasionally explodes, with geysers that burst scalding sulphur-scented water from the ground like a cannon ball at Satan’s pool party. It’s the kind of place where people would invent glíma.

LÆKJARGATA 8 // 101 REYKJAVIK // #ICELANDICSTREETFOOD

Dining

Delicious, even if you can't pronounce it

The year 2020 wasn't kind to many restaurateurs. Let's be honest, it's a tough business. Nevertheless, Iceland's culinary scene is seeing the emergence of new players and the old guard stepping up their A-game. Restaurants continue to diversify; we've got ourselves an izakaya inspired spot, while tasting menus are being questioned and reinterpreted. The scope of "Icelandic cuisine" is broadening to include not just produce and products but also their sourcing and seasonal integrity on this harsh island by players big and small. Whether it is globally recognised Nordic fine-dining or fragrant Thai curries, traditional Icelandic cuisine or family-friendly sushi, to everything in-between, this guide to the best of everything Reykjavik has to offer has been hand-picked by our exacting panel of passionate gourmands. From budget bites to fanciful fare, we've got you covered. Skál!

Best Burger

Le Kock & Búllan

Joint Winners

Le Kock, Tryggvagata 14

O burgers, glorious burgers! If there were a national dish, burgers would be it for Iceland. And at Le Kock, their irreverence is thankfully a social media strategy only. When it comes to the food, it is still the 'gourmet tuck shop' the founders envisioned. The potato roll game is strong and holds up despite their recent defeat at the hands of the sauce puddle muddle (a beast so savage, hardly a burger in town hasn't succumbed). Grab those extra napkins, you'll need them. Better yet, ask for just a smidgen of sauce. Singed with smoke and magic, a classic cheeseburger is still the top dog here.

Hamborgarabúllan, multiple locations

An oldie but a goodie, Búllan slings a solid burger that seals Iceland's reputation as a worthy burger destination. With multiple locations you are always close to one. A lil' birdie on our panel whispers that, "the Tommi-owned Höfði location is excellent with kids," and another swore by the Geirsgata location for the 'Steak Burger'. Also worth trying are the Tuesday 1,190 ISK deals.

Newcomer

Yuzu Hverfisgata 44

The citrus fruit extract might be a tad too pronounced in their mayo, but the steamed bread burgers at Yuzu have got everyone at the Grapevine offices converted. They arrive in a cane steamer and it's best to make quick work of the delicious treats, easy if you've got the Kimchi burger.

- 2018: Le Kock

Best Vegan Burger

BioBorgari

Vesturgata 12

Veggie burgers can be many things, but too often they're reduced to a close-to-meat contest. Standing tall amidst a sea of pre-made patties and bean paste offenders are their scrumptious grain-bean-lentil patties, with the earthiness of assorted veggies and buckwheat and flax with the charcoal grill adding a lovely singed note. They've really listened to the dry burger complaint cause the 'Special Vegan' with its crown of baked apples is quite an unmissable treat, whether you are vegan or not. The tomato sauce & kale pesto are pretty great too. For clean, small-batch, slow living, BioBorgari is worth the love.

Runners-Up

Jömm Kringlan & Faxafen 14

With soy-based Öumph products, Jömm have a wide selection of burgers to choose whatever your plant-based junk food craving may be—if the basic burger doesn't cut it, there are other variants and wraps and pitas as well. Psst... our panel says, "their sauces are a game changer."

Junkyard Skeifan 13A

Vegan food is often depicted as big on health and low on taste. Skeifan's Junkyard proves that to be fake news. The restaurant serves up sloppy, greasy cruelty-free junk food that hits the spot whenever you're in the market for a full on burger experience. It's relatively light on the wallet as well.

Best Pizza

Flatey

Grandagarður 11 & Hlemmur

Newcomers rarely, if ever, win a category in the Best of Dining. But when Flatey blew onto the pizza scene in Reykjavik, they brought with them unknown-in-these parts Napoli pie-game. One bite of that foldover, blistered pie and we were floored. A few years in, and Flatey's pie-game is still as strong as ever. The menu spans classics—the Margheritas are a panel favourite with their puddle of milky mozzarella—and beloved faves, like the Tartufo, a truffled pizza bianco and the Vegan(o) with its rosemary speckled potatoes. Keep an eye out for the offspring of the 'Battle of the Bakers'.

Runners-Up

Black Box Pizzeria Borgartún 26 & Háholt 13-15

Black Box combines the Napoli-style sourdough craze with the familiarity of commercial pizzerias, all in a dark Goth arcade vibe. While originality might be a sore point for some panellists, we see the appeal of a well made pie, especially one with avocado and crushed pistachios.

Íslenska Flatbakan Mathöll Höfði & Bæjarlind 2

With a large wood fired oven (gas assisted), Flatbakan is an homage to homegrown pizza style. Think a thin crust, generously sauced pie topped with local favourites—regular suspects jostling for attention amidst dates, bananas and of course cream-cheese, and a melty vegan cheese.

Previous Winners

- 2018-9: Flatey
- 2017: Hornið

Best Bakery

Sandholt

Laugavegur 36

In this hotly-debated category the competition is tough. Nothing gets passions boiling quite like talk of bread and butter. And still showing the young guns how it's done is the grand dame of all things baked, Sandholt. Their classic sourdough might be the most well known, but spare some love for their bulgur and Egyptian barley as well. Pastries and viennoiserie is something they excel at and the seasonal Danish, in-house chocolate and artisan sodas make for more than just a bakery experience.

Runners-Up

Deig Workshop Tryggvagata 18

Deig's strength is its consistency—be it the handmade doughnuts, bagels or airy brioche-like crullers. We are suckers for their potato loaves, which the panel exclaims are "especially good with egg salad." And for early risers, this is the perfect breakfast spot with their poorman's offer of a coffee, doughnut and bagel for just a 1000 ISK!

Brauð & Co. Multiple locations

The wicked curse of expansion woes has struck our favourite bakery, but fret not! While the kanill croissant snúður can be a hit or miss, their classic snúðurs continue to be as stellar as always. The granola is always a winner, but we are currently nursing a soft spot for their custardy veinerbrauð.

Previous Winners

2019: Sandholt
 2018: Sandholt and Brauð & Co.
 2015-7: Sandholt

Best Indian

Austur-Indíafjélagið

Hverfisgata 56

Richly decorated with warm teak and antiques, this dinner-only establishment is ideal to perk up those taste buds after days of eating, ahem, milder fare in these parts. While the festive Diwali menu "is such good value for money," as one panellist quipped, others swore by the smoky Tandoori chicken. Serving some of the best lamb dishes in town, the classic Raan Manjarabad is a whole shank slow cooked to fall-off-the-bone tenderness. Vegans and vegetarians aren't a mere afterthought and the selection of breads exceeds that of standard naans.

Runners-Up

Himalayan Spice Laugavegur 60A

Other downtown restaurants might scream tourist trap, but this little slice of Nepal on Laugavegur is anything but. The thakali thali is "the only way to do justice" to the light, hearty fare of Himalayan cuisine—subtle, fresh and wholesome. The momos are worth trying too, a perfect foil for nippy days.

Shalimar Austurstræti 4

Specialising in Lahori cuisine, Shalimar straddles the traditions of Lahore and Punjab. In layman terms, that translates to rich, slow-cooked, aromatic gravies. Reminiscent of British curry houses, this little paradise is perfect for a quick takeaway or leisurely dinners when only a curry will do.

Previous Winners

2016-9: Austur-Indíafjélagið
 2015: Gandhi

Best Thai

Ban Thai

Laugavegur 130

Thai club rules say no chopsticks and no 'adjustment of spice levels' and Ban Thai isn't afraid to curtly remind you so. Pad Thai is passé, so you are better off doing as our panel suggests, and order the #107, the deep fried chili shrimp. The juicy crustaceans are rendered sweeter and juicier cooked within their shells. "You eat the crisp shells and gnaw off the little legs, you get more of that chilli crust that way," shares a die-hard loyalist on our panel. When a restaurant's been around for three decades like Ban Thai, it is indeed an accomplishment.

Runners-Up

Mai Thai Laugavegur 118

Dining here can be a reminder of Queen's style joints, part store-part restaurant. The band of ladies churn out quick Thai classics spanning spicy larbs dusted with toasted rice powder to easy going Thai curries, be it with tofu or plump shrimp. One panellist proffered her love for them by admitting she "eats there more than she should."

Krua Thai Skólavörðustígur 21

The panel lamented the dip in quality, but appreciated the "generous portions." The pad thai is a crowd pleaser, and the curries are full-bodied and fragrant. Service continues to be attentive, so if you need a little warmth from the inside out, Krua Thai's got you covered.

Previous Winners

2015-9: Ban Thai

Best Chinese

Fine

Rauðarástigur 33

Did you know that the Chinese kanji for fine recalls that of rice/meal? This proper Sichuanese restaurant packs a wallop of flavour, heat and textural delight in each of their selections. The simply stir-fried hot and sour potato matchsticks and vegetables are exactly the kind of subtlety that has been absent from Chinese cuisines in these parts and puts to rest doubts that this is only a fiery spicy cuisine. Other must-tries are the beef in hot oil, yu-shiang chicken. The panel loves "the chewy wood ear mushrooms" and the hand pulled noodles. Most dishes are vegan and lactose free, making this little gem accessible to everyone.

Runners-Up

Fönix Bíldshöfði 12

Family-run Fönix has something for everyone. The dedicated vegan menu is a joy-ride of tastes and textures—the mapo-tofu has pleasingly jiggly cubes of tofu and the fish fragrant eggplants are silky. The lunch buffet is also a notch above similar fare.

Tian Grensásvegur 21

Designed like a time capsule of dated restaurant interiors (think red fans and gold lamps), Tian seems intent on being a Western Chinese joint. Except, amongst populars like a worthy Kung Pao chicken, there's also pillowy steamed buns and dumplings. There's a mythic secret menu, unconfirmed though.

Previous Winners

2018-9: Fönix

BEST OF REYKJAVÍK 2020

Dining

Iceland's not cheap so it better be good

Best Coffeehouse

Reykjavík Roasters

Ásmundarsalur, Freyjugata 41

While Reykjavík Roasters' mothership is undeniably at Brautarholt 2, it's hard to beat the serene elegance of their Ásmundarsalur setting. Built in 1933 by one of Iceland's most beloved sculptors, predictably, the building is a sculptor's dream and filled with natural light. According to our panel: "It's that proper third wave coffee millennial cup plus a privately-owned art space."

Runner-Up

Emilie's Reykjavik

Hverfisgata 98
A cafe and lunch spot, this cute little French import is endearing. More substantial than being just a caffeine fix, the freshly baked scones are what you should be after here. We are particularly partial to the goat cheese with spinach. Washed down with some excellent brews and a neat little selection of coffee, it makes for pleasant people-watching and tummy pleasing.

Newcomer

Kaktus Espresso

Vitastigur 12
One of those "blink and you miss it" neighbourhood cafes that make the humans huddled in Reykjavík's snowy embrace feel they're living in a vibrant metropolis. "It's cute, and with a nice lunch deal. I especially love the soup," one of our panellists offered. Part café, part cactus sanctuary, this is one for all you wallflowers out there.

Previous Winners

2015: Kaffihús Vesturbæjar

Best Sushi

Sushi Social / Osushi

Joint Winners

Sushi Social

Pinghóltsstræti 5
By regularly showcasing Wagyu beef and tuna at one of their many festive specials, Sushi Social keeps things interesting throughout the year. An homage to Icelandic sushi, this is where classic sushi meets our love for sauces. And it is still a happy union. The rainbow hued tropical drinks and the peppy music only add to that happy island vibe.

Osushi

Tryggvagata 13
Before you turn your nose up at conveyor belt sushi, hear us out. This is a fantastic way to try several different plates, stumble upon a new love—like their crispy AF Japanese wings—or determine your least favourites. The quick turnover means the sushi was made minutes ago, a win-win in a land of cold rolls. Psst... this is bound to be a hit with kids and we spotted several happy young diners practicing their chopstick skills.

Runner-Up

Fish Company

Vesturgata 2a
Fish Company has recently expanded their sushi selection, particularly during lunch service as a small and a large portion. The usual suspects of classic salmon nigiri, maki rolls and sashimi are so beautifully presented, it surely counts as a cure for workday blues.

Previous Winners

2016-9: Fish Market
2015: SuZushii
2014: Sushisamba

Best Vegan Meal

Mat Bar

Hverfisgata 26

The vegan tasting menu has, in the past year, taken hold of Reykjavík, with many restaurants giving their take on the plant-based phenomenon. Mat Bar's iteration is particularly notable, serving up a variety of both on- and off-menu dishes that have found success with herbivores and omnivores alike. With five dishes made for sharing, the menu is Icelandic-sourced and Nordic inspired, with delectable nods to other cuisines.

Runner-Up

Jömm

Kringlan 4-12
Jömm plays with the entire range of Oumph! variants, making soy sexy. What elevates a store shelf buy, though, are the clever iterations of Oumph! burgers, bowls and wraps satisfying every kind of craving. The icing on that (vegan) cake however are the accoutrements and vegan versions of a whole host of sauces, with the aioli deserving special mention.

Newcomer

SPES

Grandi Mathöll, Grandagarður 16
For too long now, vegans have had to contend with stereotypes translating to insipid restaurant offerings. Not so at SPES. Chickpeas are pulverised, dressed intensely and served atop crusty bread. Their tacos would fool meat eaters and the scrambled tofu on toast mimics eggs. Plus with most everything priced well under 2000 ISK it makes SPES quite a draw, vegan or not.

BEST OF REYKJAVÍK 2020

Dining

From fancy meals to free refill Plokkfiskur

Best Goddamn Restaurant

Sumac Grill + Drinks & Skál

Joint Winners

Sumac Grill + Drinks, Laugavegur 28

Sumac's vibrancy seeps into everything—the food, ambience, service and its mix of diners across age groups. Chef Þráinn's love for Lebanese-Levant flavours is reflected in the menu. By focusing on flavour profiles unique to the cuisines, it is a successful transplant from Beirut to Reykjavík. For an indulgent spread, we recommend getting all the dips and a few flatbreads. Mop it up with the excellent grilled lamb chops (commendable for the absence of sous vide) and the now cult whole roasted cauliflower. Our only pet peeve is the kitchen's mysterious affinity for smooth purees. Sumac, we love you but give us a gritty muhammara and the silky strands of eggplants.

Skál, Hlemmur Mathöll, Laugavegur 107

What do we say about this Bib Gourmand awarded restaurant that defies labels? Is it a gastropub or an experimental kitchen? Chef Gísli's passion for cooking from the island permeates both the food and drink. The cod wings will have you weep with joy, the charr is a buttery cocoon of comfort, and the lamb ribs unctuous. Pair with guest brews, or natural wines... or maybe a pineapple weed cocktail-on-tap is your thing. Whatever your preference, you're in for a world class experience. Peppy service and fine dining flourishes will make you forget you are in a bustling food hall. All we can say is Skál!

Runner-Up

Mat Bar Hverfisgata 26

The warm elegance of Mat Bar's gleaming brass bar is further enhanced by its striking green and black interior. The attentive details translate to the food as well. The rotational menu has gone from strength to strength with seasonal flourishes. It's affordability and sharing plates create that enviable air of conviviality.

Best Place For A Fancy Meal

Dill

Laugavegur 59

Dill 3.0, as it's popularly known, holds Reykjavík's only Michelin Star. The beloved restaurant cleverly curates an entire experience, be it the absence of branding except for subtle flourishes in the letterpress menu cards, the cutlery jar instead of place settings and the eclectic playlist. The food—a series of signature snacks—evokes a sense of Nordic nostalgia, so expect precise culinary references that'll have you mulling them over long after digestion. Even as the winning wine and dinner service are bookended by precision food, it is all designed to put you at ease, and really rattle fine dining norms. And that it does, with aplomb.

Runners-Up

Eiriksson Brasserie

Laugavegur 77

Eiriksson Brasserie mutates the classic brasserie concept with a menu that also reflects this divergent style. On it, crème brûlée sit cheek-to-cheek with tonka bean ganache. You can pick out classics like duck breast orange or wander into the hinterlands of langoustine tempura and enoki over charcoal flatbread. Add to that the 4,000-bottle wine cellar encased in a former bank vault and you got yourself one odd duck.

Grillmarket

Lækjargata 2a

Grillmarket is a stalwart in the Reykjavík fine dining scene and for good reason. Their locally-sourced menu continues to surprise and inspire after all these years. We'd recommend going for a set menu—their 'Trip To The Countryside' is a particular favourite—and letting the chefs go to town.

Best Family Restaurant

Hamborgarafabrikkan

Höfðatorg & Kringlan

Kids' Choice

The Hamborgarafabrikkan burger chain is ideal for a lunch outing with the family. There are plenty of distractions for young diners, including borrowed iPads and headphones to keep the kids entertained. The child-friendly vibe explains why it continues to be a popular haunt for birthday parties, so don't be surprised by the chorus of "hún á afmæli í dag" wafting around the room every now and then. There's a wide range of juicy square burgers, veggie options and house sauces to choose from, with comfortable seating and friendly service.

Parents' Choice

Osushi

Tryggvagata 13

It isn't always sunshine and rainbows when dining with young wards. At Osushi, the entertainment is taken care of by its engaging conveyor belt format. The selection manages to please safe and adventurous palates alike, so whether its toddler friendly hosomaki or play-with-your-food edamame or spicy tuna rolls or more than acceptable sashimi, there's something for everyone. Chopstick skills are an enviable bonus, what's not to like?

Newcomer

Laundromat

Austurtræti 9

With the same branding, focus and vibe as its original predecessor, Laundromat is bringing families back out from their hidey holes. The basement play area is brand spanking new, clean and ready to satiate any play time demands of its young customers, while their parents can enjoy some respite. The tasty burgers are just a bonus really.

Best Cheap Meal

Icelandic Street Food

Lækjargata 8

Plokkfiskur, a fish stew cooked with boiled potatoes and bechamel, is traditionally eaten with heavily buttered rugbrauð (dark, dense rye bread) and is on everyone's must-try list when they visit Iceland. At Icelandic Street Food you can have all this and more—shellfish soup, traditional kjötsúpa (lamb soup), the aforementioned 'Fisherman's Special', hjónabandssæla (rhubarb-oatmeal crumble pie) and pancakes for about 2000 ISK. The clincher, however, is that buying one shellfish soup allows you to have a refill of the lamb soup, and then the fish and then the desserts and it goes on! Simply put, an impossible offer to beat. The barnyard funk is especially ambient as you sit and sip on your lamb soup like a farmer of yore.

Runners-Up

108 Matur
Fákafen 9

A dark horse amongst Skeifan's many food joints is 108 Matur with a refreshing spin on Icelandic lunch buffets. Embracing the Soviet canteen like disciplined, sustenance only vibe, it is "honest old school construction but with extra flair" like the fresh green peas in lieu of canned ðra, with a flurry of fresh dill. Pick your main course (vegan available too!) from the rotational menu, and the salads, sauces and all other accompaniments are unlimited. Coffee and cake seal the deal.

Noodle Station
Laugavegur 103 & Kringlan

If you, like the martians in Bill and Ted's Bogus Journey, have only the word "station" in your vocabulary, you are halfway to naming this celebrated cheap meal in Reykjavik: Noodle Station. You can smell the coriander for metres around this place, and whenever the temperature drops you can see the conden-soup-sation on the windows. Their menu is simple—noodle soup with vegetables, noodle soup with chicken, and noodle soup with beef.

Best Brunch

The Coooco's Nest

Grandagarður 23

It's with good reason that this family-run restaurant has made such a strong impact on the local brunch scene. Such is the popularity of their sumptuous fare that they now offer brunch starting Fridays. The pancakes are American perfection. That award-winning sourdough is put to good use under poached eggs bathed in a silky hollandaise tickled with blue cheese, the wreck-your-bank-account avocado toast, or just simply grilled and served alongside an omelette that feeds six. We kid, but only partially. Iris, one of the owners, insists people leave well fed and stuffed. And even though Luna Florens extends the seating availability, it's best to make a reservation.

Runners-Up

Snaps
Þórsgrata 1

To Sunday like the locals do, head to Snaps. Serving up the perfect laid-back brunch, choose from various egg preparations, sandwiches or salads. The croque monsieurs are especially good if you are nursing a hangover and nothing but a rich sando will do. Couple with the bloody good Bloody Mary and you'll be ready for another night of debauchery.

Public House
Laugavegur 24

Well it's official: bottomless brunch has arrived in Reykjavik. For 4,990 ISK, Public House offers unlimited courses as well as unlimited bloody marys, prosecco, beers, and mimosas to pair. The gastropub serves up an eclectic Japanese-Icelandic-style menu and we'd particularly recommend their "Not Pizza" beet root and goat cheese wonton as well as their tiger shrimp spring roll. Book a table in advance!

Best Seafood

Fish Company

Vesturgata 2a

Fish Company is the definitive seafood restaurant in Iceland. Their around the world inspired tasting menus are a great way to try the best the waters around Iceland have to offer, from Atlantic cod served Japanese style to harissa stocked wolf-fish. Many chefs have cut their teeth in this very kitchens. The restaurant also has fantastic lunch deals. With an eye on sustainability, they are also limiting their serving of the now overfished Icelandic langoustine, a laudable effort.

Runners-Up

Fishmarket
Aðalstræti 12

This upscale eatery serves everything from lightly salted cod to fresh sashimi on the rocks. The tasting menu comes recommended, as do the interesting concoctions from the bar. Everything on the menu gets an Asian nod, and the approach to fusion cooking always hits the spot. Booking recommended, but impromptu sushi bar stools are sometimes available.

Sægreifinn
Geirsgata 8

"They always seem to have something I wouldn't have otherwise tried," said one panellist of Sægreifinn's food. Case in point being the skewers of the day's catch, grilled to order. Our astute panel points out that the originally curry-laced seafood soup is now more a tomato based broth. Nevertheless, the entire experience of huddling up in front of the porch, sipping on soup and listening to tales of it's late founder, the Sea Baron, is unmatched.

THE NATURAL CHOICE

ICELANDIC LAMB - BEYOND COMPARE

True to our tradition of 1,100 years, pure-bred Icelandic Lamb grazes freely, acquiring delicate seasonings of berries and herbs. Its premium quality, texture, and delicious flavour make it the natural choice of leading chefs. Look for the Icelandic Lamb Shield, a guarantee of excellence awarded to Icelandic restaurants.

Best Lunch Place

Mímir

Hótel Saga

Following a sprightly makeover, Mimir is garnering accolades for its extremely affordable lunch offers. Where else would you dine on a two-course meal; from lamb saddle to roast cauliflower to the best roasted potatoes, cooked by some of the most promising chefs, for just 2500 ISK? Sure the prices have risen slightly since they opened, but the fast paced, suitable for lunch service, and all the flourishes of fine-dining makes you forget impending deadlines. That alone makes them a clear winner.

Runners-Up

Jómfrúin Lækjargata 4

This outpost of Denmark in Iceland upholds its Danish tradition of smørrebrød uncompromisingly. You might want to skip the akvavit for lunch, but it pairs so well with Jacob's Plaice (who're we kidding, you deserve the schnapps!). Perhaps the shrimp pyramid is more to your liking. Or the velvety Danish paté. Once you've been seated and treated like the royalty that you are, you'll see why this was a panel favourite.

Hipstur Mathöll Höfða, Bildshöfði 9

This charming little restaurant is all heart and Nordic deliciousness. Did you know the popular 'mushrooms on toast' is vegan? The fish of the day is a carefully curated flaky fish bowl with fresh sprigs of herbs, veggies, grains and a lovely golden focaccia. Dish of the day and weekly specials also mean you can dine here without lunch-room dread. Score!

Best Late-Night Bite

Mandi

Veltusund 3b

We might as well just call this "The Mandi category." Whether it's their full-flavoured meats, their extensive vegan options or their idiosyncratic social media messages, this Syrian kebab place stole Reykjavik's heart. Crispy falafels, lamb shawarmas, teeny desserts, or a pack of ciggies; Mandi's got you. If there's any doubt that these gentlemen were destined for true kebab greatness, consider that one of them is called Hlal!

Runners-Up

Devitos Laugavegur 126

Even bad pizza is good pizza and Devitos is better than bad, it's good. Another staple of the Icelandic late nite bites for over 25 years, this place is sure to sort you out at the end of a long shift at the hotel or a long line at the bar bathroom. Now stop your yapping and grab a slice with pepperoni, pineapple, and cream cheese like a real native.

Newcomer

Gríska Húsið Laugavegur 101

It's a well-known fact that a rib-sticking combo of fat and carbs will help slow the absorption of alcohol in the body. As if that wasn't enough, a 2010 report stated that "l-cysteine can be used to decrease acetaldehyde concentration in the achlorhydric stomach during alcohol exposure." In layman's terms: 1,200 ISK chicken döner kebab is anti-booze medicine.

Best Place To Go With A Group Of Friends

Fjallkonan

Hafnarstræti 1-3

What is it about playful drinks housed in popcorn bags, puffy sugar clouds of cotton candy, ferris wheels of doll-house desserts and tiers of colourful hummus that makes hanging out at places that much more fun? Fjallkonan is the hottest new spot for large groups or anyone hankering for a hands-on engaging experience. That the food tastes delicious, the cocktails inspired, cosy seating and the service knows how to keep the good times rollin' makes this our favourite place to head out with your besties and frenemies alike.

Runners-Up

Bastard Brew & Food Vegamótastigur 4

It's a pity that after-work drinks aren't really a thing here. Even so, Bastard Brew's multi-level space with deep booths, cosy corners and open dart area makes it a perfect haunt to let your hair down after a long, tiring day. The GnT selection is expansive enough to warrant revisits and the brews on tap are perfect foils to the there's-something-for-everyone selection of foods.

Tapas Barinn Vesturgata 3b

Peppy music, check. Tropical drinks, check. Platters upon extensive platters of copious amounts of Spanish-inspired tapas, check. Service that never falters through the night (even if you do), check. Tapas Barinn continues to be a favourite haunt for returning Icelanders, bachelorettes, and send offs. No matter the occasion, Tapas Barinn keeps it lively.

Best Newcomer

Makake

Grandagarður 101

Makake, the newest Asian izakaya is a colourful outpost of a typical Japanese street. Named after the hot tub loving meditative monkeys, Makake is throwing down the gauntlet for casual Asian dining. Since their opening, they have introduced dimsum brunches, pop-ups with guest chefs, and vegan tasting menus in addition to their staple fare of a selection of dumplings, small plates like the braised pork belly, an interesting assortment of vegetable-forward plates and desserts like mochi and anko. With an emphasis on handmade slow food, Makake is well on its way to redefining Asian cuisine in Iceland.

Runners-Up

Vinstúkan Tíu Sopar Laugavegur 27

When a chef and restaurateur's mutual passion for natural wines and quality bar snacks collide, a little gem like Tíu Sopar is born. The wineria (like vermouth, get it?) is perfect for chat-up-the-barmen banter and noisy weeknight street parties, all while noshing aged Tindur with beurre noisette, crackling Padron peppers, charcuterie and the occasional 'Fried Chicken' pop-up, which should just be a staple dammit!

Kastrup Hverfisgata 12

From the same people at the helm of Brauð og Co. and Snaps, comes Kastrup, a promising little Danish station. Clever in its repurposing of Hverfisgata 12 where Dill once was, this currently smørrebrød only place is plating picturesque platters of open-sandwich classics like roast beef and fried plaice. Definitely one to watch out for.

Greasy burger, or glazed, torched cod head?

Best Ice Cream

Skúbb

Laugarásvegur 1

Nothing quite says 'live in the moment' like a melty cone of luscious ice-cream. Did you know that Skúbb only uses milk from Bíobú, a local organic farm? Did you know they are the most non-distinguishable between vegan and dairy ice-cream scoops? That is how vibrant and intense each scoop is at Skúbb. Lately, the panel's been gushing about the passion fruit with coconut milk, although the dark chocolate and berry sorbets are also not to be missed. The waffle cone itself has improved dramatically, with a shattering crispness. With a small curated selection that reflects the seasons, this imaginarium of joy churns everything from tomatoes to licorice roots into ice-cream. We heart you Skúbb.

Runners-Up

Ísbúð Vesturbæjar Hagamel 67

A cultural centre, blitzer of ice-cream shakes, dipper of chocolate dips in assorted toppings and maker of the best gamli-is (old school water-based ice cream) beloved Ísbúð Vesturbæjar is basically an institution. Nothing quite says you are a local like going here during a mild storm, getting your dairy fix for the slow bíltúr ahead.

Arna Ís og Kaffi Eiðistorg 15

With expansive views out to the ocean, this lactose-free cafe and ice cream spot is particularly welcoming for those with kids. The scoopers oblige whims young and old and the extensive nammi (candy, a local favourite with ice creams) selection should keep any pre-sugar grumpiness at bay.

Best Tasting Menu

Óx Reykjavík

Inside Sumac, Laugavegur 28

An intimate dining experience unlike any other, Óx seats only 12 diners each night in an intimate chef's table setting. There is little room for error in this gastronomic drama where everything unfolds in full view. Whole roasted duck carved exquisitely, whole grilled monkfish passed family style, delicate morsels of langoustine paired with beers and wines, all while you chat away with the chefs and fellow diners. The intimacy heightens the experience, and as the wine pours it starts to feel like you know each other well. Once the dust settles, it's time to leave and you do so a tad bit shaken as you walk out from the tiny timber cabin into the bustling Sumac.

Runners-Up

Dill Laugavegur 59

Turning the tasting menu concept on its head, Dill features a singular seafood and/or meat across multiple courses in order to really honour the produce in its entirety. Expect to be dazzled by the foreplay—the onion cake is gaining rightful notoriety as is the wine pairing, in that there is no pairing at all, but 'a' wine to accompany a selection of dishes, allowing you to discern for yourself what pairing you enjoy best.

Matur og Drykkur Grandagarður 2

Whether it is land-, sea- or a vegetable-forward tasting you want to experience, you're in safe hands at Matur og Drykkur. Each menu is a considered study and showcases Iceland's best produce—foal, reindeer, cod and lamb all make an appearance. The progression between courses is well portioned and well timed, and you'll leave with a sense of having explored the island's culinary landscape.

Best Italian

La Primavera

Marshall House, Grandagarður 20

With the re-opening of La Primavera, the restaurant has earned loyalists both old and new. Sitting pretty by the Grandi harbour in Marshall House, it is particularly popular with the lunch crowd. Fair warning however, this is lunch at an Italian Nonna's house, meaning you'll be dawdling out of there stuffed to the gills. Dinner however is an elegant affair. The focus is on coaxing maximum flavour from seasonal ingredients at their prime by doing as little as possible. You might start the year with pan-fried fresh cod, and then move onto light summer salads, perhaps grilled broccolini, and in the fall, pasta woven with wild mushrooms. A right royal treat however is the truffle (from San Miniato) festival the restaurant intends to continue hosting.

Runners-Up

The Coooco's Nest Grandagarður 23

Between their brunches and breads, it's easy to forget that Coooco's is really a Cali-Italian place at heart. The sourdough pizzas deserve particular mention, as do the appetisers that could easily serve as a meal by itself. The vegetarian byggoto (barley risotto) is deeply satisfying, while the olive oil cake is a true slice of simple joy.

Eiriksson Brasserie Laugavegur 77

It's hard to categorise Eiriksson with its Italian-French leaning menu. The interiors and menu whisper nouveau riche indulgence, the 'fancy' ingredients are a giveaway. But all these reservations aside, they dish out a mean veal, good steaks and a smattering of pasta and pizzas.

Best Lamb

Apótek

Austurstræti 16

Whatever lamb is being served here, rest assured it'll be a meal to remember. With experienced chefs who share an unbridled passion for meat and fire, all the plates come out perfectly executed. Such is their love for lamb, that every Sunday they host a traditional Sunday roast with all the fixin's—sugared potatoes, green peas, mushrooms and a slow cooked leg of lamb plus a little family-style dessert for just 2990 ISK. And if that isn't your cup of tea, then both their lunch and dinner menus showcase three different cuts of lamb.

Runners-Up

Lamb Street Food Grandagarður 7

You don't need to sell a kidney to taste good Icelandic lamb. This little restaurant is built around the animal; even the walls are adorned with graphic illustrations of the clipped ear tag patterns of sheep. The flatbreads and selection of sauces like the herby zhoug are designed to highlight the grilled meat.

Matarkjallarinn Aðalstræti 2

By foregoing frivolous add-ons, Matarkjallarinn lets the lamb speak for itself. Whether you order the grilled lamb chops or the popular shoulder it will be cooked to tender succulence. Icelandic lamb is prized for its clean, grassy flavour and here it is showcased in a fittingly unpretentious fashion.

Best Sourdough

The Coooco's Nest

Grandagarður 23

Which bakery has the best bread is a hugely contested topic in people's homes, on social media food groups and on the Grapevine's panel too. The giant wheaty boules at Coooco's are a balance of flavour, with a tang that dissolves into sweetness and an airy crumb structure. A nice crunchy crust yields to a billowy soft interior. It is fantastic on its own with nothing more than a schmear of butter and is a great vehicle for toppings. Such is the demand and affection for Lucas's bread that last Christmas saw advance orders being taken.

Runners-Up

Sandholt Laugavegur

Legend has it that the sourdough culture has been kept alive and clearly well-fed over decades at Sandholt. The alchemy of flour, water and time left to do its thing is transformed into one of the most beautiful rustic loaves with an enviable open crumb, the holy grail for many an enthusiastic baker.

Brikk Mýrargata 31

For yeasted delights both sweet and salty, Brikk is a one-stop shop. From Nutella swirled snúðurs to a spicy chili-flecked loaf, this bakery/cafe churns out some pretty solid sourdough as well. Light and airy, not too 'holey' and often warm if you pick them up in the morning, these loaves will find favour with those prefer a 'softer' crust.

Best Traditional Icelandic Food

Café Loki

Lokastigur 28

Long before Icelandic food was considered 'cool', this unassuming cafe has been unabashedly celebrating tradition. From the classic farm style kjötsúpa (lamb soup) to herring and plökkfiskur, everything is a throwback to how the island once ate. We recommend trying the rye bread soup as well—it's part what the heck, part dessert, but all delicious. And for those writing their own tales of bravado, there is fermented shark to be washed down by Brennivín.

Runners-Up

Þrír Frakkar Baldursgata 14

To get a sense of Icelandic food culture from a time before it was fashionably New Nordic, pay a visit to Þrír Frakkar. This restaurant has not let anything sway them from tradition—you'll spot everything from foal, to black bird, to cod throats and plökkfiskur that are sure to remain long in your memory. A visit to this place underlines that good old-fashioned Icelandic cooking can be all kinds of memorable.

Salka Valka Skólavörðustígur 23

Named after Halldór Laxness' two-part novel, this charming little eatery dishes up affordable, plentiful food, offering visitors a taste of Iceland on a budget. The plökkfiskur and the steamed fish are cooked in home-style modesty and they accommodate vegans and vegetarians as well.

Best Soup

Ramen Momo

Tryggvagata 16

An elbow room only ramen bar, this local favourite has been going strong for five years now. Their passion for a big old bowl of noodle soup shows in their constant reinvention. The sesame forward creamy Tantanmen is deeply flavoured, the hoisin cooked pork adding a touch of sweetness and providing momentary relief against the heat of the chilli oil. The Icelandic ramen with lobster broth is a local nod that really works. Their range of vegan ramen is unparalleled, although their tonkotsu continues to be the weak link. The Korean teas, both hot and cold, are delightfully original. But Ramen Momo's biggest strength are their house-made noodles—springy and elastic, the consistency of these organic strands make them a clear winner.

Runners-Up

Hi Noodle Frakkastigur 9

This adorable little place with a small selection is known for its all day cooked tonkotsu, but stay for the spicy Dan Dan. Crispy chilli oil, minced pork speckled Chinese original, this is a fantastically delicious bowl! (hint, you can also ask for the 'dry' version). The vegan options are also quite satisfying. It is a pity however that their broth:noodle ratio is off. We want more of your tasty broth, Hi Noodle!

Noodle Station Multiple locations

Showing Reykjavík how to soup for sup long before we had soup alone restaurants was Noodle Station. With a choice of three different broths, rest assured whatever you order will arrive piping hot, in a portion too large to finish. Joy And Jollof Rice

Introducing Ogolúgo, 101's only African restaurant

Words: Poppy Askham Photo: Art Bicnick

Ogolúgo means “welcome” in Hausa and the name couldn’t be more fitting for Laugavegur’s latest culinary arrival. Since its early July opening, the team behind the restaurant have been determined to deliver a taste of Africa to 101 by offering a host of authentic dishes from attieke to domoda, all served with a generous helping of laughter and hospitality.

Filling a gap in the market

“I want it to feel like home, that was the main idea,” explains Alex Jallow, Ogolúgo’s owner, waiter, and resident TikTok superstar. “The taste of the food, the smell of the spices, the crowds of people—when you walk in you feel like you’re home, like you’re in Africa.”

Alex hails from the Gambia and Senegal region of West Africa, but grew up in the U.K. and has been living in Iceland for over ten years. “I love Iceland, but I just felt that that African touch was missing in this country, so when I was able to make it happen, it was a dream come true.”

Before taking up the role of restaurant frontman, Alex worked as a chef. “I got my love for food from my mum. I was always in the kitchen, running in and stealing food from her whilst she was cooking,” he explains. “When I was 11, I would always ask to go to the market. My mum would ask me what I wanted to buy, but I just wanted to go to the market so I could get close to all the different ingredients. That’s the kind of person I’ve been ever since I was little. I’ve always loved food.”

He suddenly jumps up from the table and disappears into the kitchen, emerging with a plate of jollof rice served with crispy plantain and grilled tilapia. He also brings the rather reluctant head chef Dawda in tow. “This is West Africa’s favourite dish, but it can be found all across the continent” Dawda explains. “I have lots of favorite recipes to make and I’m always experimenting, but at the end of the day I’ll always love jollof rice.”

Service with a smile

Although the food is superb, what really stands out from a dining experience at Ogolúgo is the atmosphere, largely thanks to the overbrimming enthusiasm of the restaurant’s owner. Alex practically leaps from table to table, frequently breaking out into dance as he delivers steaming meat pies and huge bowls of okro soup. It’s this exuberance that has earned him hundreds of thousands of views on the restaurant’s hit TikTok account—username ogolugo101—where he puts his own vivacious spin on the trends of the day, attracting a younger crowd of dedicated diners in the process. His cheerfulness is infectious; within moments of entering the restaurant, you’re grinning along with him and even agreeing to make a TikTok cameo.

“Trust me, I don’t even know where I get my energy from myself and I’m in here every single day,” he laughs. “It’s all about happiness. There’s so much positive energy in this restaurant. My customers look forward to coming here, and they love it when I’m dancing around the place. It makes me happy to make them happy so I don’t even notice that I’m running around and that time is going by. I can’t complain. I am happy, very happy.”

And there we find Ogolúgo’s secret: not only is it 101’s only African restaurant, it’s also the postcode’s most joyful dining spot. I leave the restaurant like every other diner, with a full stomach and a smile on my face, having promised a swift return. 🍴

Info: Visit Ogolúgo at Laugavegur 85 and be sure to check out their TikTok ogolugo101.

Caeta Gelato

Aðalstræti 6

Ice cream is a longstanding culinary staple for Icelanders. But for a long time, Reykjavík has lacked one of the dessert’s most well-known, and perhaps most delicious, varieties: gelato. Enter Gaeta Gelato. Newly opened on Ingólfstorg, it is owned by newly-arrived Italian transplants with nearly 25 years of experience as gelatai. Their artisanal and authentic flavours, from blueberry to Piedmontese hazelnut, are made with fresh and well-sourced Icelandic ingredients. Though only recently opened, Gaeta has already won over a crowd of committed regulars. NB

Taj Mahal

Tryggvagata 26

A nice compliment to fancier establishments like Shalimar or Austur-Índíafjlagið, Taj Mahal fills a previously unoccupied niche in Reykjavík’s South Asian culinary scene: a simple, classic, relatively affordable Indian restaurant with staple curry, tikka masala, and tandoori dishes served alongside portions of fresh rice or naan, to be washed down with a Kingfisher beer, one of India’s best-known brews. Eat in or take advantage of Taj Mahal’s quick and affordable delivery in the capital area if you’re feeling lazy. NB

Drinking

Tipsy or wasted, the choice is yours

Let's not beat around the bush: Icelanders love to drink. In fact, there is probably nothing Icelanders like to do more than drink, which could very well be why this country doesn't have a space program. 2019 was a big year in the downtown drinking scene, with some old favourites closing and some strong newcomers opening. Some facts of life, however, remained the same: alcohol is still expensive, but that doesn't stop us from partying. How else would we have sex?

Kaffibarinn

Bergstaðastræti 1

Three times the charm! Yes, for the third year, the Reykjavik institution of Kaffibarinn is Grapevine's Best Goddamn Bar. Are you surprised? How could you be? While many Reykjavik bars come and go and redecorate and rename and put on bells and whistles, Kaffibarinn has stayed the course for almost three decades—because it's just a really good, reliable place. It plays host to Reykjavik's artistic intellectuals, creative talents, and, well, downtown characters and consistently puts on a show. Basically, you'll never have a boring night at KB. It's no ordinary watering hole.

Newcomer

Röntgen Hverfisgata 12

A bar that's been open but a few months winning the runner-up spot in the Best Goddamn Bar category? Quelle surprise! Well, go to Röntgen on a weekend night and you'll understand why. It's a party bar in the purest sense, with a rowdy dance floor, delicious cocktails and a fanbase that's just growing and growing. We stan.

Runner-Up

Gaukurinn Tryggvagata 22

With dim lights, leather sofas, and gender-neutral bathrooms, Gaukurinn is the preferred hangout for the unorthodox Reykvikingar, so if you're looking for like-minded peeps, here you go. The venue hosts everything from metal to underground rap to drag extravaganzas to stand-up comedy, so you never really know what you're gonna get on any given night.

2015: KEX Hostel

Best Place To Start The Night

Veður

Klapparstigur 33

For the second time in a row, Veður has snatched up the Best Place To Start The Night gold medal. And for good reason. This charming, low-key, hole-in-the-wall serves up some great cocktails and a dedicated crowd that grabbed each member of the panel's heart. "There's something casual about Veður in that you feel fine relaxing and chatting but it's still a nice and sophisticated bar," one panellist explained. "But that said, the first time I went they were playing a new wave punk playlist, so it's not your average quiet cocktail bar."

Runners-Up

Loft Bankastræti 7

"Loft is perfectly situated between the two areas of downtown and their Happy Hour lasts until 21:00," one panel member raved. "Their service is also great, and their balcony is fantastic in the summer." It's no wonder the hostel's cosy bar has a cult following. Go there on weeknights for a plethora of events including karaoke, watercolouring, and speed dating.

Miami Hverfisgata 33

Miami has a lot going for it—an amazing interior, delicious cocktails, and a relaxed atmosphere early in the night that's very conducive for chill convos and bonding. "It's a good vibe in the early evening," one panellist raved. "Also, it's a well-done novelty bar. I love that."

Best Place To End The Night

Prikið

Bankastræti 12

Prikið is the bar version of the "I'm going to bed early tonight vs. me at 3 a.m." meme. At 22:00 you'll have a bunch of regulars relaxing at the bar sipping brews, but arrive at 3:00 and it's Project X. "It's a younger crowd, but it's always a party on weekends and if there's a concert going on, well, you won't find a more intimate venue than the Prikið floor," one panel member said. Their outdoor smoking area should be applauded too. Hang out long enough and you'll be sure to buddy up and find an afterparty.

Runners-Up

Kiki Queer Bar Laugavegur 22

Kiki is a love-it-or-hate-it situation, but if you're looking to dance to the greatest hits of the past 30 years, it won't disappoint. "Look, if you want to dance to 'Euphoria' by Loreen, there's only one bar that will play it three times a night," one panel member laughed. "You always know what you're going to get, and it's fun."

Kaffibarinn Bergstaðastræti 1

"No matter where I go during the night, I always return home to Kaffibarinn," one panel member explained. "You'll eventually find me crying on the steps of the smoking area." All jokes aside—there's a reason this is the Best Goddamn Bar. Late at night, the crowd gets rowdy, the convos interesting, and the dance floor sweaty in the most addicting way.

Best Sports Bar

American Bar

Austurstræti 8

With screens as far as the eye can see, a long bar that goes on for days, all the burgers and snacks of your junk food dreams, a dedicated big-screen viewing room in the back, and a “sun” terrace to smoke on at half time, American Bar is the perfect place to watch the big game. Whether it’s boxing, NFL or Premier League, they always have a wide range of screenings. Grab yourself a brewski and prepare to shout at the screen in some kind of vicarious catharsis of random victory or loss.

Runners-Up

Lebowski Bar

Honour “The Dude” at this laid-back and unpretentious locale that is the best of both worlds during sports games. Some people will get rowdy; others will stay chill, so you’re certain to find your crowd as you munch on some of the best burgers in Reykjavík. PS: If you’re feeling fancy, pick up a White Russian.

English Pub

If it’s football you’re hankering for, go to those that know it best: the English. This pub serves up a dark wooden Anglo-kitsch interior, a long bar with plenty of staff, and loads of comfortable seating, and, best of all, a plethora of screens. Make sure to yell loudly and berate Gylfi Sigurðsson when he misses his penalty—you wanted an authentic pub experience, right?

Best Craft Bar

BrewDog

Frakkastígur 8

To call the panel passionate about BrewDog would be an understatement. “To be honest, I was prepared to hate BrewDog because it’s a chain,” one panelist admits, smiling. “But I was wrong. I absolutely, absolutely love it.” The Scottish outpost offers low-lit booths, sofa seating and a thriving list of beers. At any given time, there’s a choice of ten or more of the BrewDog brand and a rotating selection of Icelandic craft brews. Note: They’ve also got fantastic wings and cauliflower wings too!

Runners-Up

Skúli Craft Bar

For a quiet drink, the real beer nerds hole up in Skúli. The cosy drinking hole offers a great selection of local and guest craft brews, with the option of a flight of beers for the indecisive or curious. Make sure to stop by in the summer, they’ve also got some great outdoor tables.

Session Bar

Session Bar is a minimalist craft-beer-focused drinking den housed in a former hair salon in the heart of downtown. There are sixteen beers on tap, both Icelandic and international, and they have a focus on keeping the prices affordable, in contrast to Reykjavík’s generally pricey craft bars.

Best Wine Bar

Port 9

Veghúsastígur 9

Cosy and tucked away with a secretive vibe, Port 9 is a true hidden gem, hosting a delicious wine list as well as potentially the most intimate atmosphere in Reykjavík. “It’s a place not a lot of people know about,” one panel member raved. “You feel like you’re going abroad—walking into a bar in San Francisco or Barcelona.” The panel also praised its balcony, calling it the ideal locale for sipping some Pino in the summer sun. “It’s also a great place to bring a Tinder date.”

Runners-Up

Vinstúkan Tíu Sopar

“When Vinstúkan Tíu Sopar opened, I went in there and my immediate thought was, ‘Wow, this place is great,’” one panel member exclaimed. The charming basement bar focuses on natural wines as well as wines from smaller producers and lesser-known regions. They have twelve bottles open at any one time, and the selection changes daily, so you truly never know what you’re going to get.

Spánski Ingólfsstræti 8

Spánski barinn—“Spanish Bar” in English—is a dim-light bodega-style dwelling that serves up a delightful selection of wine and tapas. It’s one of those places you should expect to settle in to—as per an authentic Spanish experience, it’s easy to lose yourself in a long afternoon siesta.

Best Place For Cocktails

Miami

Hverfisgata 33

With a sharp aesthetic that’s miles ahead of any other joint in town, Miami serves up pure vice with a splash of cosmopolitanism and a dedicated basement ping-pong room. Their cocktail menu—designed by master mixologist Martin Cabejšek—takes your favourite classics and mixes them up into complex 21st century drinks. If that’s not enough, they also offer Cuba Libre on draft. So sit back, drink, and you’ll feel just like you’re in ‘Scarface’—minus the mountains of cocaine.

Runner-Up

Apotek

Apotek is a spacious, upscale restaurant whose cocktail creations have picked up a bundle of local awards. The building’s pharmacological past lives on in its name—Apotek means pharmacy—and the cocktail list, which is divided up into categories like “painkillers” or “stimulants,” exemplifies this. We’d recommend the Black Death Negroni and the Stranger Tides.

Newcomer

Jungle Cocktail Bar

“They’ve got a cocktail titled, ‘To Kale A Mockingbird,’” one panel member laughs. “It’s a tequila and kale cocktail. How can you beat that?” Jungle, though very new to the scene, has already made a large impact—with more than their punny names. Helmed by vets of the Reykjavík mixology scene, it’s truly one to watch in 2020.

Why have just one happy hour when you can have nine?

Best Place For Live Music

Gaukurinn

Tryggvagata 22

The queen of Reykjavík's grungy bar scene, Gaukurinn is currently the dank home of the city's queer and alt-culture. With the best sound system in the city, the bar puts on events almost every night—from heavy metal fests to goth nights to drag shows to all manner of eccentricities. It also operates a proactive safe space policy for LGBTQ+ gig goers and features gender neutral bathrooms (and free tampons)! Gaukurinn has consistently been on the forefront of Icelandic music, and many of the biggest and edgiest Icelandic acts—from Hatari to Misþyrming—played their first shows there.

Runners-Up

MENGI

Öðinsgata 2

You never know what you're going to get at Mengi. The venue is known for their brilliant and eclectic programming. On any given night you might catch an intimate low-fi electronica release or an experimental cowbell symphony. For those looking for the avant-garde in the city, you've found it.

Harpa

Austurbakka 2

When it comes to a grand musical experience—cushy seats, bubbly champagne, posh clientele, the works—you just can't compare to Reykjavík's iconic concert hall. Behind the glittering glass facade, Harpa plays host to a diverse roster, from the Icelandic Symphony Orchestra's regular performances to biweekly jazz nights and the occasional famous superstar. Don't it feel nice to be fancy?

Best Happy Hour

Kaffibrennslan

Laugavegur 21

The former Hemmi og Valdi is still a firm favourite for those who like a bargain beer. At 550 ISK a pop for beers and 750 ISK for wines from 16:00-20:00, in a beautiful, comfortable wooden house, you can't really argue. "It's such a nice house," said one panellist. "I had my first snog there. It's cheap and easy, with a really good vibe." The panel also praised the "location, location, location. It has a perfect outdoor area for summer, and you can sit upstairs in the rafters in winter. Cheap beer and a nice place to sit, what more could you want?"

Runners-Up

Miami

Hverfisgata 33

Although nonplussed by the late night crowd, our panel love the good prices and plush interior of the Miami design bar. "They have all the fancy beers on happy hour, with table service," they said. "It's great before all the yuppies get there. The interior is just crazy, and a must-see in itself."

Bravó

Laugavegur 22

We've all had that moment—it's 11:00, your girlfriend just left you for your brother, and all you need is a warm seat sip your problems away in. Enter Bravó, the long-time title-holder of the longest happy hour in the city, where everyday from 11:00 to 20:00 (!!!), you can sip cheap beers, wines and shots among some seriously dedicated regulars. Best Newcomer Bar

Röntgen

Hverfisgata 12

Here we are—another unanimous winner! Since it opened but months ago, Röntgen has charmed the party-goers of Reykjavík. "They are doing something ambitious and fun. It looks great. It has good energy, good cocktails, and a great dance floor," one panel member announced. This prompted a giggle out of another panelist. "Yes, I have done some stupid dancing there and it was always accepted." It's safe to say that there hasn't been a bar that has so quickly found its audience, and we can't wait to see what Röntgen gets up to.

Runners-Up

Vinstúkan Tíu Sopar

Laugavegur 27

Every oenophile—wine connoisseur, for the uninitiated—knows that to truly appreciate wine, it's imperative to find a quiet and undistracting environment. Vinstúkan Tíu Sopar is a cosy basement bar perfectly made for this. The menu is varied, the bartenders knowledgeable, and the location ideal for starting out a night, which made it an easy pick for runner-up.

Jungle Cocktail Bar

Austurstræti 9

Jungle is a back-to-basics mixology haven. Filled with cosy leather couches, the bar has already—in its short time—elevated the downtown cocktail scene with its unusual, innovative, and frankly delicious drinks. Stop by, take a seat, and prepare for some of the wildest mixes you'll find in Reykjavík.

Best Kept Secret

RVK Brewing Company

Skipholt 31

Yes, there is a bar on Skipholt, and yes, it is one that you need to check out. The RVK Brewing Company has slid under the radar since it opened, but now, we're here to bring it out of the shadows. The brewery and beer hall offers a varied list of brews, most of which they make themselves locally. "It's one of those places that you have to know that it's there because it's so out of the way," one panelist explains. "But it's excellent."

Runner Up

Konsulat Bar Hafnarstræti 17-19

For after work drinks, the upscale Konsulat Bar is an unparalleled experience. "They have a great Happy Hour between 16:00 and 18:00 with free sushi," one panel member raves. They also praised the decor—a cosy and fancy mix perfect for sipping cocktails on.

Newcomer

12 Tónar Bar Skólavörðustígur 15

Wait, we hear you ask, 12 Tónar—one of Reykjavík's most beloved record stores—has a bar? Yes, it does, and it's a true hidden gem. C'mon, in what other place can you dig through records while sipping a beer?

Best Date Place

Hlemmur Mathöll

Laugavegur 107

Iceland's first food hall is great for a casual night out with your significant other. There are plenty of people buzzing around, giving it a relaxed, social feeling, and there are plenty of options—grab some wine at Króst, pizza at Flatey, or a cocktail at SKÁL. Yes you're in public, but the buzz of the hall gives you a certain privacy. Plus, if things get steamy, you're right next to the bus for an easy ride home. Halló.

Runners-Up

Spánski Bar Ingólfsstræti 8

So you've got a Tinder date and you're looking for a quiet locale where you won't run into your ex, best friend, or baby daddy. Check out basement wine bar Spánski—it's dark, cosy and full of delicious Spanish vino and tapas. Just remember: No politics. No religion. No weird childhood trauma stories.

Luna Flórens Grandagarður 25

Part flower-child, part spiritual and with a whole lot of whimsy thrown into the mix, this cosy and hand-crafted bar is so intimate it makes you wanna spend the day musing about geodes and tarot card readings. If you're looking to properly get to know a flame—one you're astrologically compatible with, of course—grab a house cocktail, a slice of vegan cake, and explore your lunar cycle.

Best Outdoor Drinking

Petersen svítan

Ingólfsstræti 2a

The unanimous winner of the Best Outdoor Drinking category, it took the panel only 10 seconds to proclaim Petersen svítan the top balcony in the city. Located atop the cavernous Gamla Bíó theatre, the upscale, ritzy spot could rival the best rooftops of New York and London. There, you'll find loads of seating with soft furniture to luxuriate on, an unparalleled view across the harbour, cocktails, and all the sun could you could wish for. "You just simply can't beat Petersen svítan," one panelist said simply. "In the summer, there is no better place to be."

Runners-Up

Fjallknan Hafnarstræti 1-3

During those lazy sunny summer days, grab a table outside Fjallknan. Then, order a cocktail—we'd recommend the Candy Floss Boss—sit back, and soak in that Ingolfstörg sun. Ain't that the life?

Loft Bankastræti 7

Loft stands many heads and shoulders above most of the al fresco drinking spots in Reykjavík, not least because it's on the roof. Their balcony, which looks out over Bankastræti and downtown Reykjavík, is legendary and for good reason—it's a delightful locale for a late afternoon brew or coffee. Be warned, it's a very popular after-work choice, so arrive early to get a table.

LoveStar

Andri Snær Magnason, 2013

If you are an Icelander and have already read 'LoveStar' by Andri Snær Magnason, read it again. The book not only predicted social media, but also how it would be utilised for marketing on a global level, and how it would eventually disconnect us from reality. When it was published in 2004, 'LoveStar' was supposed to be science fiction, but nowadays it's more science than fiction. Set largely in the North of Iceland, Andri's masterpiece critiques an Orwellian megacorporation—which is eerily similar to Facebook, to be honest. Now is the perfect time to read it, we believe, because with the way 2020 is going, space burials are probably not too far off. VG

Got some downtime? We relate. Pick up one of these Icelandic books to enrich your mind while you wait for this chaos to end.

when Iceland declared independence from Denmark, which corresponded with the introduction of cinema to Reykjavík, the eruption of Katla and the deadly Spanish flu epidemic. What a time! The plot revolves around a young gay man who is obsessed with cinema during these catastrophic years. There's forbidden love, imaginative escapism and the horrific reality of a viral pandemic taking over. Sjón possesses a magical realism that dabbles in steampunk, and the book is a short read so expect to throw the novel out the window of your car

The Blue Blood

Oddný Eir Ævarsdóttir, 2015

An autobiographical novella available on Kindle, 'The Blue Blood' charts the author's journey as she attempts to become pregnant, via various means. Oddný's search takes her from the corridors of a sperm bank, to a market in South America, to a cave under Eyjafjallajökull; along the way she muses on subjects like masculinity, Nazism, bohemianism, mythology and history. 'The Blue Blood' is full of vivid moments, and captures the turbulent joy, seriousness, sadness and absurdity of personhood. JR

Reply to a Letter From Helga

Bergsveinn Birgisson, 2010

Bergsveinn Birgisson's novel is one of those rare ones that'll make you love your partner a little bit more. It's a well-written saga about an old sheep farmer's regrets when it comes to love. The story is incredibly modern and honest when it comes to the human experience and the terrible regret about love lost. Plus, it also contains some of the best sex scenes ever written in Icelandic. It's almost mandatory to read this book in the countryside, under the cacophony of a running stream, a golden plover, and a distant, perhaps after reading, weirdly erotic, bleat. VG

Shopping

Consumerism might be destroying the planet, but hey, you can't walk around naked. While Iceland may not be a worldwide shopping destination due to high prices and its relative isolation, there's still a plethora of unique products that are worth spending your hard-earned dough on. From handmade lopapeysur created by dotings Grandmas to obscure Björk b-b-b-sides, here's your essential guide to shopping in Reykjavik.

Best Goddamn Store

Fischer

Fischersund 3

Last year, Fischer wowed the 2019 Shopping panel, with the then-newcomer unanimously winning the Best Goddamn Store for its out-of-the-box take on the shopping experience. This year was no different. From packaging-free shampoo to a special perfume section, the store treads the line between a shop and a design space, serving up a sensory, highly aesthetic environment that makes every purchase feel special. "Fischer changed just what a store could be in Reykjavik," praised one panellist. "They showed that you could push the limits and do something personalised and different. It's inspirational."

Runners-Up

Farmers Market Laugavegur 37 & Hólmaslóð 2

Many brands have claimed the throne of traditional Icelandic style, but perhaps no brand has done it so luxuriously as Farmers Market. With references to the past wrapped up in modern silhouettes and opulent fabrics, Farmers Market serves up traditional Scandinavian fashion for the modern age. For this, they deserve applause.

Nexus Álfheimar 74

Nexus helped geekdom flourish in Iceland, creating a warm meeting place for those interested in comics, sci-fi, role-playing games, table-top games, and other fandoms. "They created a culture and a house for it," exclaimed one panellist.

Best Design Store

Akkúrat

Laugavegur 80

This local design Mecca has been a stalwart of the Icelandic scene from day one, endeavouring to offer a careful collection of highly curated products showcasing the best of local and Nordic design. Their ever-evolving shelves are filled with fascinating materials, and as soon as the shop's name was mentioned, panellists instantly and eagerly began sharing some of their favourite finds. "You'll always find something unique at Akkúrat," one panellist cheered. "They also present new and off-the-beaten-path designers, so things feel one-of-a-kind." In December, the store opened a second location up on Laugavegur. We can, therefore, only imagine how they will thrive in 2020.

Runners-Up

nomad. Frakkastigur 8f

A relative newbie to the Laugavegur scene, nomad. was a surprise favourite of the panel. "I love nomad. They have amazing books, lamps, candles and more," one panellist raved. "And it's so important that Laugavegur has these kind of stores." Pro-tip: The owner is a photographer and often has exhibitions on the lower floor. Check it out.

Hönnunarsafnið Garðatorg 1, Garðabær

The Museum Of Design And Applied Art offers a quirky array of design objects and books, some related to the exhibits within, some completely random. For extra oomph, they also have a workshop inside where you can watch designers create right in front of your eyes.

Best Fashion Boutique

Kvartýra N°49

Laugavegur 49

It's no understatement to say that Kvartýra N°49 changed the face of Reykjavik fashion when the minimalist, Bauhaus-esque spot opened in 2018. Before then, yes, athleisure was popular, but nowadays, you can't throw a stone in Reykjavik without hitting some cool tracksuit-clad kid covered in Cyrillic typography. Specialising in Russian streetwear, the store brought post-Soviet street style to the city with an eclectic selection of brands like Sputnik 1985, Volchok, and Fusion. The store also showcases innovative Icelandic brands like Eygló and Sushchenko, as well as high-end American designs from Opening Ceremony.

Runners-Up

Stefánsbúð/p3 Laugavegur 7

Stefánsbúð showcases local designers and second-hand high-fashion finds (hello 1990's Gucci!) as well as accessories from quirky international brands. "It's truly a boutique," one panellist exclaimed. "It's quirky and zany. You don't know what you're going to find but you know it'll be exciting."

GK Reykjavík Tryggvagata 21

GK Reykjavík has long been a favourite of the trendy Reykjavik fashionista sect for special occasions, though it's never won a Grapevine award until today. "It's pricey, but it's full of proper, beautiful pieces. When you buy something, you think, 'I've worked really hard for this,'" a panel member declared. The panel also praised the shops' new location in Hafnartorg.

Hildur Yeoman

Skólavörðustígur 22

Hildur Yeoman has dressed everyone from R'n'B goddess GDRN to the swan lady herself Björk to recent Grammy/BAFTA/Emmy/Oscar award winner Hildur Guðnadóttir. She's a patron saint of Icelandic fashion, known for her dreamy patterns, lush textures, spacey body-cons, and beautiful tailoring. Her hole-in-the-wall Skólavörðustígur store is no exception, hosting not only her eponymous brand but Vanessa Mooney jewellery, bright candles, and more. "Her stuff is expensive but it's timeless. Moreover, Hildur is often in the store, so you can chat with her about the items and she will help you style it," one panel member said. "Where else can you find that?"

Runners-Up

Geysir

You can't talk about shopping in Reykjavik without mentioning Geysir. The store defines elegance with their beautiful staple pieces, which manage to both harken back to the old-world, Arcadian vision of Iceland while also being distinctly contemporary and innovative.

Húrra Reykjavík

"Húrra Reykjavík was massively hyped when it opened and it's stayed hyped, but that's because they know what they are doing and are good at it. They've stayed fashionable and relevant," the panel determined. The minimalist streetwear/athleisure store offers two locations—one for men and one for women—and serves up a mixed selection of classic items and trendy cuts.

Best Second-Hand Store

Extraloppan

Smáralind

"Extraloppan revolutionised the second-hand market in Iceland," declared one panellist. "Everyone has too many clothes and this is the best way to get rid of them." The Smáralind favourite works like a big flea market. Each booth has a different vendor, so you'll never know exactly what you'll find at this cornucopia of used clothing. "It's an eco-friendly way to keep your closet fresh," another panellist praised. "You're not importing clothes. You're not buying new. You're taking what someone else didn't want directly from them." The selection is notoriously varied, so expect to find everything from Geysir sweaters to Adidas tracksuits.

Runners-Up

Wasteland Reykjavík

The Reykjavik take on the Danish franchise, Wasteland came onto the secondhand market and quickly dominated. For super á la mode downtown looks—i.e. cheerleader uniforms, Guy Fieri t-shirts, and astronaut-esque jumpsuits—this is the go-to. Though it's only been in the city for a year, Wasteland has already proved it doesn't just sell trends, it makes them.

Red Cross

Chock full of clothes that'll either make you say, "Who on Earth would wear that?" or "I will die without that," the Red Cross stores are great whether you end up buying something or not. Profits go to helping the local community and the shops also accept donations, so drop off some bags after you Marie Kondo your closet.

Best Place To Buy A Wool Sweater

Handprjónasamband Islands

Skólavörðustígur 19

"This is a no-brainer," one panellist said, the moment this category came up. "Handprjónasamband Íslands is the real-deal. It's real Iceland. Many places mass-produce and import their lopapeysa [traditional Icelandic wool sweaters] nowadays, but [at Handprjónasamband], you're buying a freshly-knitted sweater directly from the maker, who is probably a grandma that poured a lot of love into it." Stacked from floor to ceiling with cosy woolly goodness, the store offers sweaters, gloves and more, in every colour of the rainbow. This, dear reader, is ultimate Ísland.

Red Cross

The Red Cross is not only the cheapest option for a second-hand wool sweater, but it's also one of the more unusual spots to pick one up. Racks of sweaters of various styles and vintages greet you at the stores, and while perusing, it's easy to imagine you're snatching up something owned previously by a Westfjords farmer named Þórgímur. Hey, you could be.

Farmers Market

For a more stylish take on the Icelandic sweater, look no further than Farmers & Friends. Their designs update the traditional lopapeysa into a fitted and distinctly high-street getup. Pair it with fitted trousers and you'll blend in at any Scandinavian fashion event.

Best Jewellery Shop

Orrifinn

Skólavörðustígur 17b

Orrifinn is known for their sensual, raw, detailed and carefully crafted pieces that manage to be at once timeless and distinctly modern. Often inspired by mythology, the beloved store was a unanimous and instantaneous pick for this award. "To be frank, it's difficult to beat them. Orrifinn has an aesthetic, a style. The interior and the jewellery work together. Not to mention, you can watch them working in front of you," one panellist raved. "They truly honour the craft of jewellery-making."

Runners-Up

Hildur Hafstein

Hildur Hafstein is known for her slightly hippy, slightly witchy vibe—a lone jewellery shaman within the Icelandic scene. "She's doing her own thing. She doesn't follow trends. She's got a niche all her own," the panel proclaimed, praising her mix of delicate jewellery with unusual shapes. Stop by her tucked away Klapparstígur studio to experience the magic in person.

Aurum

"I'm obsessed. I'd buy absolutely anything in that store," one panellist exclaimed upon mention of the word Aurum. The store, which occupies one of the best spots on Laugavegur, serves up finely-crafted pieces firmly based in Icelandic nature. "It's a wild and woody brand that still seems chic and modern. Again, I'm obsessed."

Best Homeware Shop

Kokka

Laugavegur 47

Kokka is a fancy fantasy-land for food and homeware lovers, filled with all sorts of utensils you didn't even know you needed (but, obviously, you do). For those looking for new toys to furnish a modern and really, really stylish kitchen, Kokka should be your first stop. "They recently expanded and it's really nice," one panel member raved. "It's proper quality, humble, and cool. It's also very accessible and easy to navigate, which I appreciate. The owners are also very pro-Laugavegur, which is also important for me."

Runners-Up

Geysir Heima Skólavörðustígur 16

"What else can you say about Geysir Heima?" one panellist asks. "It's well-curated. The interior is beautiful. Geysir has cultivated an empire and it's for good reason." The upscale home shop, which offers everything from their iconic wool blankets to minimalist glassware to a fantastic selection of art books, will make you fall in love with Scandinavian style. Pro-tip: Check out their basement. There's often exhibitions down there.

Epal Skeifan 6

Epal has been a mainstay of the Reykjavík design scene for more than 30 years, supporting it and constantly pushing it forward. "You can't talk about Icelandic design without mentioning Epal," one panel member explains. "They are devoted to Scandinavian style."

Best Bookstore

Eymundsson

Austurstræti 18 &
Skólaavörðustígur 11

Eymundsson is a classic bookstore, offering up the newest in Icelandic writing and international titles. It has the rare characteristic of being perfectly curated for both locals and tourists, so if you're a traveller looking to get an illustrated edition of the Sagas, or a Reykjavík kid hoping to pick up the definitely-going-to-be-released upcoming Game Of Thrones book, this would be the place to find it. Bonus: The cafes also make for great people-watching spots.

Runners-Up

Bókin Klapparstígur 25-27

If you're looking to buy the newest Dan Brown, Bókin may not be your thing. But if you're looking for a collectors-edition copy of an Icelandic book long out of print, there's only one option, and that's Bókin. "It has charisma, which makes it a winner," one panel member said. "If there's a store in Reykjavík with charisma, uniqueness, nerve, and talent, it's Bókin."

Bóksala Stúdenta Sæmundargata 4

Located within the main building of Háskóli Íslands, the university bookstore runs the gamut from speciality academic texts to classics, new fiction, notebooks and much more. Another plus? The on-site coffee shop serves up what are potentially the fairest priced coffees in town, as does the Háskóli Íslands cafeteria next door.

Best Record Store

Lucky Records

Rauðarárstígur 10

Lucky Records is the punky, underground horse of the Reykjavík scene. It's one of those shops that is easy to get lost in—expect to easily spend an entire afternoon perusing their selection. "Lucky Records is very in-tune with the local music scene," one panellist explains. "If anyone in the city has released anything, no matter how small, it'll be in this store. Moreover, the shopkeepers will have listened to it. They are really knowledgeable and opinionated in that old-school record shop way." Pro-tip: Make sure you check out the back room.

Runners-Up

Reykjavík Record Shop Klapparstígur 35

Reykjavík Record Shop is a haven created by music nerds, for music nerds. Presenting the best of the Icelandic and international scenes, every piece has been meticulously curated to ensure that you're getting the crème de la crème of music, be it contemporary or classic.

Geisladiskabúð Valda Laugavegur 64

Valda is by far the most obscure shop in the city. "You'll find things in this store that you won't find anywhere else in the world. I once found a Japanese bootleg copy of a Finnish band's first record. How on Earth did they get that?" one panel member reminisced. "It's a gem."

Best Grocery Store

Krónan Grandi

Fiskislóð 15-21

For the fourth year in a row, Krónan has proven that it is the best grocery store in town. “Krónan at Grandi is no doubt the freshest market in the city. It’s beautifully organised and has a great selection. You really couldn’t ask for more,” one panel member raved. They also praised its wide selection, which has everything from speciality vegan products to obscure meat cuts. For downtown rats without cars, Krónan might seem like a bit of a trek, but the panel urged that the prices and selection are so far beyond that of downtown grocery spots, it is absolutely worth it.

Runners-Up

Melabúðin Hagamel 39, 107

For foodies looking for artisanal deli meats, fresh figs, rare cheeses and all sorts of unexpected, hard-to-find treats, Vesturbær’s beloved Melabúðin should satiate your desires. “People find Melabúðin inspirational,” one panelist said. “It’s also a part of the Vesturbær culture. If it ever left, people would riot!”

SUPER1 Hallveigarstigur 1

Taking over Bónus’s old locale, Super1 has been a surprise success in the 101 community. It has an infinitely better selection than the Laugavegur Bónus location—as well as a significantly less depressing interior—and it’s also open 24/7. Win-win. That said, it will allegedly be replaced by Krónan soon, so keep your fingers crossed.

Núllið Gallery

Bankastræti 0

“Núllið Gallery has a purpose and an attitude that is desperately needed in this city,” the panel determined. “It’s fresh, curated, and has its finger on the underground pulse of Reykjavík. To be fair, it literally is underground.” The pop-up gallery project space—located in the old Freddie arcade—hosts exhibitions, events, performances and more, focusing on the newest, brightest, and strangest of Icelandic talent. It’s an edgy, eclectic space that has consistently wowed with everything it’s done. Check online for upcoming events, and no matter what, show up to see them.

Runners-Up

Pastel Flower Studio Baldursgata 36

Pastel Flower studio is only open on Fridays from 13:00 to 18:00—so plan accordingly. The studio uses cut, dried, and fresh flowers to create unique arrangements that reference classic Icelandic nature in an unexpected and innovative way. Trust us: You won’t find a florist in the city that’s in anyway comparable.

Street Rats Tattoo Hverfisgata 37

Kristófer, a.k.a. Sleepofer Tattoo, changed the game of Icelandic tattooing. He’s proved himself to be a fresh, experimental artist whose works have become a somewhat coveted symbol in the city. An in-demand, somewhat elusive figure, he recently opened up his own studio, Street Rats Tattoo, on Hverfisgata. So if you’re looking to get your travel tattoo, go there. It’s way more interesting than a Vegvisir.

Best Men’s Clothing

Geysir

Skólavörðustígur 16

Geysir’s signature touch is that of clean designs with quality materials; works that are luxurious but wearable, casual yet conceptual, and modern yet timeless. “Their men’s collection is a standout,” one panelist said. “If I could, I’d get everything from that store.” The dedicated men’s clothing store lies on Skólavörðustígur, just a stone’s throw away from their women’s branch and homeware shop. Inside is a cornucopia of woody tones, cosy materials, and cuts that could go from the international runways to a relaxed night at home. Stop by for pure Scandinavian goodness.

Runners-Up

Farmers Market Laugavegur 37 & Hólmaslóð 2

No one puts classical Icelandic style into the 21st century quite like Farmers Market. Their clothing somehow manages to walk the line between debonair and utilitarian. They are warm enough to get you through the darkest Icelandic winters while still stylish enough to make you look suave while doing it.

66° North Bankastræti 5 & Laugavegur 17-19

Everyone from countryside farmers to downtown cool-kids don this iconic Icelandic brand. Peruse their wares and it’s obvious why—their quality and aesthetic is impeccable. These are pieces that will last not only your lifetime, but probably your grandchildren’s.

Activities

Get off the internet already!

So, you've shopped in the shops, drank the drinks, and eaten all the foods. And whilst those things are all super fun, culture and the outdoors are the missing pieces of the puzzle for a perfect trip. Whether it's a gleaming museum or a grimy artist-run gallery, a springtime hike or a trip to try and glimpse the aurora, here's where to do it.

Best Pool

Vesturbæjarlaug

Hofsvallagata 107

Vesturbær is one of Reykjavík's most bustling areas, and probably the only locale where you could bump into Prime Minister Katrín Jakobsdóttir, renowned artist Ragnar Kjartansson, and a member of Sigur rós in the same day. Vesturbæjarlaug is smack in the middle of the hubbub and serves up a wonderful selection of hot tubs chock full of chattering artists, students, and other 107 locals. The pool is unique in the sense that it offers up pretty much anything you'd need—a shiny outdoor pool, big hotpots, a large steam room, and a particularly lovely outdoor changing area, which you should take advantage of in the summer. And remember, don't hesitate to converse about the state of things in the hot water—Icelanders love to debate politics, philosophise about art, and make fun of, well, everything.

Runners-Up

Árbæjarlaug Fylkisvegur 9

The main reason the panel chose Árbæjarlaug was for its stunning view of the city. It's an impressive view of the east of Reykjavík, showcasing a huge forest, Elliðarárdalur, and below that you have an extraordinary view of the city's skyline. Also—you have to give it up for the pool's fun 90s architecture.

Laugardalslaug Sundlaugavegur 105

Although Laugardalslaug is the largest pool in Reykjavík, it's often crowded by tourists. "It has become the tourist pool," said the panel. "They all get sent there while the locals enjoy the other pools of Reykjavík." It does, however, have a huge range of hot pots and facilities, also used by the post-workout crowd from the World Class gym.

Best Gallery

i8

Tryggvagata 16

i8 is once again the best gallery in Iceland. Over the years, it's given us works from internationally lauded art superstars like Ragnar Kjartansson, Elin Hansdóttir and Ólafur Eliasson, putting Icelandic art on the worldwide map and helping it stay there. Although it's a commercial gallery, it's not a hoity-toity stuffy spot—expect to see conceptual cutting-edge museum-sized displays, rather than conservative and conventionally appealing wall-based work. Best of all, there's a sharp wit and a sense of fun running through the gallery's roster, in sharp contrast to the often academic or po-faced offerings of the contemporary art scene.

Runners-Up

BERG Contemporary Klappartígur 16

For the past few years, Berg Contemporary has concretely established itself as the go-to spot for contemporary art in Reykjavík. Their large, beautifully renovated space is known for blurring the lines between the conceptual, the abstract, the art, and the functional with their installations and exhibitions. That may sound complicated, but what we're trying to say is simple: Stop by.

Hverfisgalleri Hverfisgata 4

Hverfisgallerí consistently impressed our panel in 2019 with a roster of brilliant exhibitions by young artists like Loji Höskuldsson and the incredible talented Davíð Örn Halldórsson, among others. This gallery is (and we cannot emphasise this enough) ambitious. Stop by for the best and brightest of the scene.

Best Art Museum

Kjarvalsstaðir

Flóragata 24

Kjarvalsstaðir was the first art museum in Iceland built specifically as a visual art showroom. The house is an homage to the iconic Icelandic artist, Jóhannes S. Kjarval—hence the name—and in fact, one can still find his art adorning the walls. This year, the museum showcased itself in standout fashion, with a hot streak of historical explorations of creative stalwarts like Ólöf Nordal and William Morris. One must also applaud their iconic architecture. On top of that, it's also home to one of Reykjavík's finest and most underrated coffeehouses.

Runners-Up

Nýló / Living Art Museum Grandagarður 20, 101 Reykjavík

Since 1978, over 2,000 artists have been connected to Nýló in one way or the other. Founded by the legendary Icelandic 70s art group SÚM, the sole purpose of the museums is to open up discussions on experimental and progressive art. Basically, if you want to experience the radical art scene in Iceland, whet your palette at NÝLÓ.

Gerðarsafn - Kópavogur Art Museum Hamraborg 4

Gerðarsafn is one of those hidden gems outside of Reykjavík. Located in Kópavogur, the museum offers a fresh take on Icelandic art, and also gives people an opportunity to meet and listen to their artists in their fantastic artist talks. It also has a coffee shop and a delightful garden.

Kling & Bang

Grandagarður 20

The Marshall House serves up a number of top galleries, but the artist-run Kling & Bang is a true standout. No matter what they have on the roster, expect something ambitious and unique—from makeshift karaoke rooms to gardens covered in bees. Another amazing thing about Kling & Bang is that they play host to not only well-known internationals, but also to up-and-coming talents. The space never ceases to amaze with its provocative, vibrant style.

Runners-Up

Ásmundarsalur Freyjugata 41, 101 Reykjavík

Ásmundarsalur is hard to pinpoint—their events and exhibitions are so varied that its hard to distill into a few words. Stop by to see young artists creating in their workshops, grab a macchiato at Reykjavík Roasters, and don't forget to stop by at Christmas for their art market. It's an exhilarating venue, and we can't wait to see what they pull out of their hat in 2020.

Gallery Port Laugavegur 23b

You could perhaps call Gallery Port the dive bar of the Icelandic art scene—and we mean that in the coolest, most in-the-know and loving way. This artist-run space, which is located smack dab downtown on Laugavegur, serves up gritty, unusual, and eclectic art by people who will probably be famous one day. Note: It's also one of the few venues where you can buy the brilliant art you see on the walls.

The National Museum

Suðurgata 41

A treasure trove of the country's history, covering everything from early culture to clothing, metalsmithing, religion, and more, it's well-curated and well designed, even showcasing contemporary displays that connect to modern cultural waves like football and feminism. Trust us, it's an amazing feat of a museum—somehow making silverware interesting while also displaying a baby skeleton. Creepy? Kind of, but we love it. On another note, they also play host to Kaffitár, one of the best cafés in town.

Runners-Up

The Culture House Hverfisgata 15

The 'Sjónarhorn' ('Perceptive') exhibit in Safnahúsið presents a notable and original approach on the visual heritage of Iceland by categorising it in simple terms like 'up,' 'down,' and 'again and again.' 'Up' for example describes everything connected to power, such as God and royalty. 'Down' is not about the devil, but rather the earth itself, showcasing volcanoes and plate tectonics.

The Settlement Exhibition Aðalstræti 16

Yearning to learn more about the first 101 hipsters of Reykjavík? Well, the Settlement Exhibition has got you covered. Smárabíó

Smáralind, Kópavogur

The closure of Bíó Paradís means Iceland no longer boasts an art-house cinema, so we've had to pivot to celebrate the best of the more mainstream cinematic experiences in the city. We're fans of Smárabíó for two reasons: it's easily accessible by bus and it offers an unbeatable VIP luxury experience, where you can recline on cushy chairs with some room to groove while you munch on your nachos. They also regularly rebroadcast some classic mainstream cinema—at the time of writing 'The Shining' and 'The Shawshank Redemption' are screening—so there's some opportunity to catch more than just the latest Hollywood offerings.

Runners-Up

Háskólabíó Hagatorg

Háskólabíó, located in the west of Reykjavík, showcases worldwide blockbusters as well as local Icelandic films (check online to confirm the availability of English subtitles). It's a cosy location within walking distance from downtown that'll satiate your desire for the whole popcorn-Avengers experience.

Kringlubíó Kringlan

Kringlubíó has the lucky location of being inside Iceland's first shopping mall, Kringlan. It showcases the newest Hollywood flicks and has the notable location of being close to Stjórnutorg, the mall's food court, where you can find everything from greasy Dominos to vegan maverick Jömm to the Icelandic hot dog institution Bæjarins Bestu.

Brimketill Lava Rock Pool / Grindavík Local Pool / Reykjanesviti

Reykjanes is, unfortunately, often overlooked by tourists. We honestly can't fathom why, as the area is chock full of beautiful lava fields, steamy hot springs, and some great local pools. Not to mention, it's only a short drive from Reykjavík. Our recs? Stop by the Reykjanes Lighthouse, Brimketill rock pool, and end the day with a swim at the Grindavík swimming pool and a bowl of lobster soup at Bryggjan. If you have time, take a stop at Kleifarvatn, where you can mosey amidst hot springs and the bright grassy landscape.

Best Place To See The Aurora

Gróttá

Seltjarnarnes, 170 Seltjarnarnes

Gróttá is something of a hidden gem. At the end of the Seltjarnarnes peninsula, not far from the centre of Reykjavík, there's a lonely, windblown, red-topped lighthouse, with a walkable causeway that's only accessible at certain times, depending on the tide. There's a black beach, a miniature hot pot, and a nature reserve. Now, to find the Northern Lights, it's rather complicated. Basically, you stand on this picturesque beach, open your eyes, and look up. There you go. Pure happiness. Note: Be aware of the tides if you're gonna cross over and check out the lighthouse. You could get stuck overnight.

Runners-Up

Landakotstún Hávallagata 14-16, 101 Reykjavík

This spot is a sneaky one. It's smack downtown, but yet there's magically enough darkness there to spot the aurora if it's burning up above the city. Where is it, you ask? Find the Catholic Church—there's only one—and walk to the bench behind it. That's it. Now, pull out your flask and enjoy the green fire in the sky.

Best Place To Spend Time With The Kids (Winter!)

Reykjavík City Library

Tryggvagata 15

For some free and wholesome family time, the parents on our panel enjoy the Reykjavík City Library. There's an excellent play area for younger children between one and three and—you guessed it—there are books for kids of all ages to look at. On the second floor, take a gander at everything from a small aquarium to a closet of pirate and princess costumes. Afterwards, show your kid your favourite comics or just chill while they run around like crazies. Don't miss their photography museum on the top floor either.

Runner-Up

Whales of Iceland Fiskislóð 23-25

Whales Of Iceland is a cavernous, hangar-sized space populated by life-sized models of whales, with information plaques and flat-screen devices containing information about the different species. It also has a fun indoor climbing structure shaped like (you guessed it) a whale. It's one of those places your kids will repeatedly demand to return to.

Harpa

In recent years, the Icelandic classical music scene has been booming, producing superstars like Víkingur Heiðar Ólafsson, Anna Þorvaldsdóttir, and, yes you guessed it, the Oscar-winning composer, Hildur Guðnadóttir. What do these three all have in common? Well, all three have played or have had their compositions played by the wonderful Iceland Symphony Orchestra. With shows every month at Harpa featuring a mix of old-school favourites and contemporary premieres, they are one of Iceland's most valuable cultural assets. Pro-tip: Don't miss their morning open rehearsals on show dates either. For only 2,000 ISK, you might even see their whole programme.
